

A close-up photograph of a blackberry branch. The branch is covered in green, serrated leaves and several clusters of ripe, dark purple-black berries. Some clusters are fully formed, while others are still in the process of growing, appearing as small, fuzzy, light-colored buds. The background is a soft-focus green, suggesting a dense thicket of similar plants. The lighting is bright, highlighting the texture of the leaves and the individual berries.

Exodus 29:24 And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD