A vibrant, close-up photograph of a waterfall cascading over large, rounded rocks. The rocks are heavily covered in bright green moss, creating a textured, almost sculptural appearance. The water is clear and falls in several distinct streams, creating a soft, white mist at the base. The background is filled with dense, dark green foliage, including ferns and other forest plants, suggesting a humid, tropical environment. The lighting is bright, highlighting the textures of the moss and the movement of the water.
